

Amanda Ashley Tersigni

Associate

Amanda Tersigni is an associate in the firm's litigation group where she represents corporate entities in connection with commercial litigation and bankruptcy matters.

Amanda regularly works with clients in and out of court, conducting legal research and drafting various pleadings including complaints for adversary proceedings and objecting to dischargeability of debts. She has additional experience representing contractors in multi-million-dollar construction claims against the City of New York and has also represented lenders in commercial foreclosure actions.

Prior to joining Norris McLaughlin, Amanda was a bankruptcy and creditors' rights associate at a Northeast law firm and represented clients in chapters 7, 11 and 13 bankruptcy claims.

Amanda earned her J.D. from St. John's University School of Law where she served as an executive research editor for the American Bankruptcy Institute Law Review and was an executive board member of the Dispute Resolution Society. She received her B.A. from the College at Old Westbury, State University of New York.

Amanda is involved in organizations including the New York Institute of Credit as a Member of the Future Leader Committee, and the Construction Financial Association as the Chair for the Young Professionals Committee.
